Monday was a good day to read and appreciate Whittier's "Snow-Bound."

A paper to a town is as fuel to the flame, neither could exist without the co-operation of the other. Whenever anything good appears in the paper about you, try a repetition of your good acts, but whenever anything that you imagine reflects upon you, don't make yourself ridiculous by abusing the paper. "If the shoe fits, grin and wear it." We understand that not long ago the Journal of this place, (Jonesburg,) very politely called the attention of some misbehaved boys to their conduct, whereupon some person of this town very impolitely "called our editor down," saying that such pieces in the paper citing these acts to the surrounding community would have an injurious effect on our town. In other words, this person seemingly meant that an exposure of a violation of any kind of law would have an ill effect on the town or county.
